VALEDICTORIAN SPEECH

learnt and unlearned certain practices and beliefs. On behalf of my colleagues, I hereby extend our sincere gratitude and appreciation to all of you who have shaped and molded us into the fine china that we are today.

I humbly dedicate this day to the Almighty, as this journey would not have been an easy one were it not for his Grace. Coming in a strong second are our parents, guardians and sponsors who have sacrificed immensely to invest in our education.

We cannot forget to thank the Board of management TNH that facilitated and subsidized expenses incurred thus far. I thank you for taking the responsibility to provide a free meal throughout last year, this gesture was something we only read in our bibles: two fish and three loaves kind of a miracle. Thank you for making it a reality. You must have been preparing us for the kilos we would add during quarantine.

I thank the Directors of Nursing services and the clinical staff who took us into their wing to ensure our learning in the clinical area was impeccable. We thank you for holding our hands and getting some of us out of those sluice rooms, to get on board. Thank you for the fine tuning.

To the supporting staff, we cannot express our gratitude enough. The catering department, whom we surrendered the sole duty of nourishment to. The home warden with the Eagle eye that kept us in check, the Cleaning staff who ensured we were in a clean environment throughout, thank you for the conducive environment, that allowed us to strive for the sole purpose that got us here.

To my fellow graduands, ours seems like something out of a comic book; the long nights, when our lectures would be impressed by how we were able to complete our assignments on time: to be honest, it was the due date. Oh and the butterflies on our assessment days, this made us perform ridiculous rituals such as swabbing a patient's armpits instead of the thermometer just to take a temperature reading. The nervous wrecks assessments caused, built in us the confidence we boast of today.

We are caught up in our emotions, as we are torn between the excitement of our future and the joy of our memories. All in all, we have been equipped with more than just the skill required to become Nurses. We have grown in wisdom and character.

We depart this hall today as Individuals with the desire to impart knowledge, gain more experience, learn from our preceptors and mentors in the clinical area. We recognize our very important role of responsibility toward the students left behind. We stood on very firm shoulders to get where we are today and we will offer our shoulders for them to stand on.

We kick off this career path knowing we do not have our lives all figured out. The truth is that we will make mistakes, disappoint others and ourselves perhaps. But we ought to remember that success is in the lessons and that ultimate failure is failing to try. Success is not final; failure is not fatal; It is the courage to continue that counts. May we uphold our oath to be safe nurses and devote ourselves to always providing healthcare with a difference.

I close this speech in the words of the lady of the lamp, Florence Nightingale, and I quote. "So never lose an opportunity, of urging a practical beginning, however small, for it is wonderful how often in such matters the mustard seed germinates and roots itself."

A pleasant afternoon to you all, my name is Angela Melly, Class representative for the class of 2020, it is an utmost honor to stand before you on this day, delivering this valedictorian speech.

To begin with, I would like to congratulate my fellow classmates come colleagues and the specialized nurses on this milestone. We began this journey three year ago very green to this field, for the specialized nurses this was about a year ago, and even then that must have come with a lot of nerves.

Some of us did not know who we were, while others knew exactly the person they were working to be. Years down the line, a lot has changed. We have
